

REDS WON'T RETREAT AT STALINGRAD

BRITISH FORCE ADVANCING ON ISLAND CAPITAL

Three Columns Meet Little Resistance in Drive on Tenenarive.

By The Associated Press

Three columns of British imperial troops were reported driving across French Madagascar toward the capital of Tenenarive and were at points on the 1,000-mile island against little opposition.

The French radio confirmed the fall occupation of the island was just a matter of time, asserting that German divisions totaled only 1,400 troops against an estimated 30,000 British.

Gen. Sir William Platt, British commander in chief in East Africa, said British forces already had advanced 80 miles from the coast on the 200-mile road to Tenenarive, a fortified city of 10,000 lying atop a 4,000-foot peak.

Other Forces Land. British sea-borne forces, following Wednesday's multi-landings on the west coast, were reported to have debarked on the northeast coast and captured the town of Vohemur, 80 miles from the big Diego Suarez naval base which the British occupied last May 7.

The southward advance of our columns down the west coast was delayed throughout the day by destroyed bridges, but by evening we were within 20 miles of Antananarivo, Gen. Platt announced.

Our patrol encountered machine-gun fire at one point, but there were no casualties.

Still another British column, moving inland in the far south, advanced 30 miles to the vicinity of Mahajanga where operations are continuing successfully," a commander said.

Despite British assertions that Japanese submarines were using the island as a base for attacks on the vital allied supply lanes to India, the Middle East and Russia, the pro-German Vichy regime continued its outcries against the attack and some axis collaborators demanded blow-for-blow reprisals.

A resolution urging "an active policy in the Mediterranean," adopted by Jacques' Doriot's French Popular party, implied a threat of sending remnants of the once powerful French fleet to the Pacific, Page 8.

JEWISH NEW YEAR SERVICE HELD HERE

Rabbi Tarshish Speaks on the "Real New Order."

The real new order must be based upon the spirit, Allan Tarshish of Columbus declared in a sermon on "The Spiritual Challenge of This Hour," delivered at the opening of services marking the Jewish New Year.

His sermon last night, Mr. Tarshish said, was the nineteenth century, but he thought he could create a new society founded upon reason and scientific invention but because its moral nature did not change along with its intellectual achievement, today we find ourselves in a jungle where men slay in a more like beasts.

The real new order must be based upon the spirit," Mr. Tarshish cited Biblical passages indicating that Israel's forefathers were convinced that suffering and affliction are only a part of spiritual victory.

The regular service of music for the Jewish New Year, most of which was directed by the choir of E. Dembaugh, both before and after the service, was Mrs. Clarence L. Dembaugh and Harold Bradt.

Services will continue to celebrate the advent of the new year: unbroken tonight. The 10-day observance will close with a service of atonement services.

Soldier Pays $306 To Reserve Marion War Bond Dinners

One of the most impressive orders for the "Dino With the Stars" war bond dinner Tuesday night has come from a soldier in the 2nd Battalion, 333rd Engineers Regiment, stationed near Marion.

A check for $306, for four $75 bonds and four dinner tickets was received by George Planck, chairman of arrangements, from Sgt. Dixon K. Saltgaver.

Sergeant Saltgaver, asked that bonds be made out to him at his Medford, Ore., home address. Yesterday he said that he will take three of his friends in the battalion as his guests. He declined to comment on his unusual purchase, made through the medium of the blank which was printed in The Star.

He said he has been in the army since May.

MARION HAS MORE NURSES IN ARMY

One Already on Duty Somewhere in Europe.

Marion has at least two more nurses in army service, one of whom is already on overseas.

This became known today following a story published yesterday telling about the enlistment of two Marion women as nurses.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Kashner of 538 Courtland avenue have received word from their daughter, Hazel, an army nurse, that she has arrived somewhere in Europe.

Miss Kashner, who was graduated from Harding High school in 1926 and Grant hospital school of nursing in Columbus in 1928, recently received a commission of second lieutenant in the U. S. Army.

Lt. Kashner reported in a letter that she is stationed at the base where she is stationed are building their own furniture. She requested that her parents send her food, heavy woolen clothing and air mail stamps.

One of the first Marion women to enlist and receive a second lieutenant's commission as a nurse is Miss Beatrice Roberts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Roberts of 832 Girard avenue, who left Sept. 1 for Brookley Field, Ala. A graduate in 1941 from Mt. Sinai hospital in Cleveland, Miss Roberts was a Red Cross nurse prior to her enlistment.

The two Marion nurses whose enlistments were reported in last night's issue of The Star were Miss Ruth Long of Chestnut street, and Miss Ann Lavitchka of Superior street.

Former LaRue Girl in Nurses Corps

A former Marion county woman, Miss Princess Wilson of Columbus, daughter of Mrs. Bertha Wilson of LaRue, has enlisted for army service as a nurse with a rating of second lieutenant. She will leave Tuesday for Camp Atterbury, Ind.

Miss Wilson was graduated from the LaRue High school and later from Mt. Carmel Training School for Nurses, and has been a private nurse in Columbus for some time.

U.S. WARPLANES CHECKED JAPS AT SOLOMONS

Clark Lee Tells How Enemy Effort To Retake Islands Was Repulsed.

By CLARK LEE

AP War Correspondent

AT SEA WITH THE U. S. FLEET OFF SOLOMON ISLANDS, Aug. 25.—(Delayed)—American airplanes partially smashed and turned back a large seaborne Japanese force attempting to recapture the southeastern Solomon islands in a two-day battle yesterday and today (Aug. 24 and 25).

Many Japanese ships were damaged, including an aircraft carrier, two destroyers and one submarine, and nearly 100 enemy planes were shot down.

The Japanese aircraft carrier, which was attacked by American navy dive bombers and torpedo planes, was first identified as the 7,600-ton Ryujō, smallest and one of the oldest of the enemy's regular carriers, but all that is known for certain is that it was a small carrier with a capacity of between 40 and 50 planes.

In addition, near misses were scored on two of the enemy's largest carriers by navy and army bombers, and both probably were damaged.

(The navy announced Aug. 23 that the Japanese had counter-attacked in the Solomons and that a half dozen of his ships were damaged in the battle, which began Aug. 21. Carrier based planes were reported to have bombed two Japanese carriers, one battleship, one transport, and several cruisers.

(The following day the navy reported six additional ships of the foe had been damaged and that in the preliminary phases of the battle 21 enemy planes were shot down with only minor losses to United States craft.)

One U. S. Ship Damaged

Our total losses were one ship damaged but not put out of action and five navy and three marine corps pilots missing.

This today fight against Japanese aircraft carriers by United States marines and army pilots was the third round in the battle of the Solomons, the first having been the marines' occupation of Guadalcanal and Tulagi islands Aug. 7 and 8 and the second was a cruiser battle Aug. 9.

Between Aug. 8 and yesterday there have been frequent engagements as the enemy felt us out in preparations for a counter-attack. These included Japanese air attacks on the Guadalcanal-Tulagi area and activity by enemy submarines against our transports, plus the hit-and-run shelling of our marine shore positions by Japanese submarines or destroyers.

All this was preliminary to this most recent battle, fought entirely by airplanes over the Guadalcanal area and seaward to the north and east of the Solomons.

It was the greatest air victory of the war for us. In addition to 96 enemy planes known to have been shot down by our planes and anti-aircraft, it is believed that many more were lost in night landings or failed to return to their carriers.

Heavy damage was inflicted on enemy shipping. The Japanese were turned back as in the first Coral sea battle and their forces dealt staggering punishment but not completely knocked out. At this writing a fight is still in prospect.

Jap Airforce Smashed. The Japanese planned to attack Guadalcanal by air and land thousands of troops. But the Japanese airforce was smashed out of the skies and the invasion fleet was turned back. Our grip on the southeastern Solomons now is firmer than before.

The Japanese invasion force consisted of two main task forces: one containing carriers with battleships, heavy and light cruisers and destroyers, and the other centering on a small carrier escorted by one heavy cruiser and two destroyers. In addition, there were several other groups of transports under warship protection.

In the battle, our aircraft made four separate attacks. The largest was by our carrier planes on a Japanese carrier. The carrier plane also attacked two other Japanese warship forces while navy and marine dive-bombers from Guadalcanal battered the support group of Japanese warships.

38 Others Injured in Accident at Curtiss-Wright Plant in Buffalo; Test Pilot Burned.

BULLETIN

By The Associated Press. BUFFALO, N. Special Agent Kenneth M. Piper said the FBI "is making an inquiry to determine whether or not there was sabotage involved."

He added there is "plenty of motor fuel" from the plant to be examined by technicians.

CITY SCHOOLS OPEN MONDAY

Increased Enrollment of About 200 Expected; Principals Meet Today.

Marion public schools will open Monday morning and an enrollment increase of about 200 over last year is anticipated, Supt. E. E. Holt said this morning.

Final preparations for the term opening were completed today at a meeting of the superintendent with all principals. With employment of one more grade school teacher, the instructors' staff is complete.

Mr. Holt said he expected the enrollment to be about 5,800 this year, approximately 200 over last year. The increase will depend on the number of Harding High school and one or two schools where enrollments have been creeping up for the last few years.

Teachers Added

In anticipation of considerable increases at the Pearl, Silver and Mark Street schools, an additional teacher has been assigned at each building.

The daylight savings hours for opening and closing schools, adopted last winter when the nation went on war time, will be followed again this year.

The hours follow: All elementary schools, 8 a. m. to 12 noon, 12:30 to 3:30 p. m. Harding High school, 8:45 to 11:45 a. m., 1:05 to 4 p. m. Central Junior High school, 8:45 to 11:50 a. m., 1:10 to 4:05 p. m. Vernon and Thomas A. Edison Junior High schools, 8:45 to 11:55 a. m., 12:30 to 3:50 p. m.

The hours are staggered to relieve traffic conditions, particularly at the noon hour.

The first week of school the first arrivals will be in school only during the morning.

First Day Plan

The first day of school, second grade pupils, the junior and senior high schools and the Crippled Children's and Sight Savings schools will attend in the morning only. Pupils of the third, fourth, fifth and sixth grades will be dismissed at 2:30 p. m.

The buildings will open at 8:30 a. m. Monday and through the school year.

Employment of Miss Jane Murray of Glouster, O., fills the teaching ranks, Mr. Holt reported. She has been assigned to a combined fifth and sixth grade at the Mark Street building. A new assignment is that of Mrs. Eleanor Epley Paglot to the third grade at the Oakland Heights building.

METAL DRIVE NETS 50 TONS

Total of Scrap Collection Yesterday 10 Tons Above Previous Mark.

Fifty tons of scrap to smelt the axle is expected from yesterday's citywide drive.

Forty-five tons already have been collected and many "call backs" to homes which were not contacted yesterday are expected to bring in five or more tons.

The drive is expected to yield about 10 tons more than the first concerted campaign a year ago.

Clyde Caldwell and George Albee, co-chairmen of the Marion salvage committee, said today they were well pleased with results.

Lawn Mower's Last Job

Among incidents reported yesterday was that of a woman who was moving her lawn when the salvage truck stopped at her home. She finished her mowing, a few more clips, turned to the driver and cried "Take it away!"

Her lawn mower is one of about 20 contributed.

Yesterday morning at the city salvage lot, from which the drive started, a woman of modest means wanted to see someone in charge. She said she had a "rational lot of stuff" in her attic which she felt sure the salvage committee would want, but that she wasn't physically able to get it down stairs. Her address was promptly taken and she was assured that her contribution would be picked up by men who would carry it down from the attic.

16 Trucks Used

Sixteen trucks, contributed by individuals, business and industrial concerns and the city, covered all sections of the city. With the drivers, who included five city firemen on their day off, were about 30 boys of the Boy Scout messenger corps of the civilian defense organization. The boys made a door-to-door canvass and helped the drivers load the trucks.

All of the scrap was taken to the Malt Bros. and Sims Bros. junk yards.

Newspaper Scrap Metal Drive Dates Are Fixed

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—A general committee for the newspaper scrap metal drive decided to recommend that the collection begin Sept. 18 and be completed by Oct. 17.

The committee, whose appointment was announced by the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, includes Roy D. Moore of the Cactus (O) Repository.

LINE HOLDING AFTER 18 DAYS UNDER ATTACK

Greatest Battle of War Over— Shadows Fighting on Five Other Russian Fronts.

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW, Sept. 12.—Stalingrad's defenders for whom defeat was declared impossible held the besieging Germans at bay today in perhaps the greatest battle of the war, a battle which overshadowed five others flaming on a Russian front of more than 1,500 miles.

Despite the heroic stand of the Red army for 18 days against the battering Nazi steel and apparently without a backward step for the past 24 hours, fresh German activity on the north of the Volga river city menaced it as never before.

Even in the midst of that struggle in which Joseph Stalin was ordered that there be no retreat, the Russians found strength to launch an offensive of their own on the Leningrad front far to the north.

There, some 60 miles east of beleaguered Leningrad, the Russians started the action mentioned for the first time in a communistic bulletin at midnight.

At the southern tip of the long front, new German efforts to expand their bridgehead south of the valuable oil fields of Grozny were said to have failed as the first snow in the high Caucasus ranges heralded another Russian winter.

Fiercest Battle Of War

But Stalingrad found its gravest peril, as probably more men and more armor were locked in the fiercest battle of this war.

The Germans hammered continuously at the weary Russians who could look back from high points in the battle zone and see the tank and tractor factories—a major arsenal of their army—which they were defending.

At some places the enemy threw as many as 50,000 men into narrow sectors against the Red army defenses. At isolated spots they wedged into the lines but nowhere was there a report that they had broken through.

New German activity north of the city, adding to the main weight of the onslaught which has centered in the west and south-west, suggested the attackers now might be trying to get another offensive into motion. Reinforcements were coming up in a steady stream.

So far, this threat was reportedly held off by Russian artillery. New Fascist forces, appearing from other fronts were being put swiftly into action.

Know Enemy

At Stalingrad, also, where the Germans have spearheaded deepest into the Caucasus, the invaders were getting reinforcements, but Russian field dispatches said enemy forces which had spanned the Terek were in peril of being wiped out and that the first Caucasian snow was hampering Nazi mountain operations.

All temporary bridges, which the Germans have strung across the swirling Terek, were reported destroyed and the Russians said that captives informed them that many German tanks were without gasoline.

Troops, which made a night crossing at another sector, failed in a flank attack designed to rescue the trapped vanguards.

Civilians hurried with their belongings through the valleys trying to escape from the invaders while the snow packed the enemy's burdened pack mules and donkeys on treacherous mountain trails.

A Red Star dispatch located the center of fighting in the region of the Terek and the Bolshoi and Malka rivers, the latter two western tributaries of the Terek.

Public Against Forcing Drafted Workers To Join Labor Union, Poll Shows

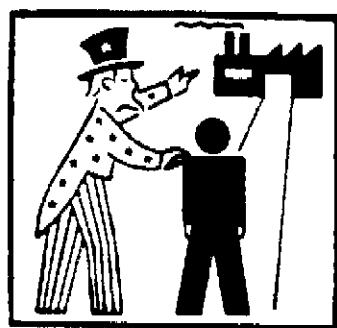

By GEORGE GALLUP

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Sept. 11—The American public has been ready for months to accept a manpower mobilization program. But it does not believe that workers must be required to join a labor union as a condition of being drafted for war work. When a non-union worker takes a job in a factory of the government, the public thinks he should be free to join or not join a union.

One of the most controversial questions in the war mobilization program is whether the government should require workers to join a union as a condition of being drafted for war work.

At the present time, workers who take jobs in some war industries must join the union before they can start work. Do you think that is fair?

workers who start to work in a factory because the government has told them to, should have to join the union, or should they be able to go to work without joining the union?

The public's attitude is shown in the following vote:

Should be made to join union 17%
Should not have to join 76%
No opinion 7%

It is reported from Washington that work has begun on a manpower mobilization bill to be submitted to congress sometime after the fall elections.

An Institute survey conducted last March found the country voting about 2 to 1 in favor of such a mobilization program at that time.

Unions Approved in Principle
Today's vote on the labor union aspect of the issue does not mean that the country is opposed to labor unions as such.

In fact, every public opinion survey on unions in the past six years has found the country favoring the principle of labor unionism by majorities of better than 2 to 1.

The public is, however, critical of certain practices in the labor union movement.

By and large the surveys have shown that what the public objects to chiefly in the union movement is coercion, or attempts at coercion.

The majority feel that a worker should be free to join a union, or to refrain from joining, as he chooses—that he should not be coerced into joining.

WILDERNESS GIRL

By LETA ZOE ADAMS

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

The wilderness in Sandy's voice all but stunned Tyra. He had misheard her. "Oh, Sandy," she began in a tense voice, "do you really think I did it to protect my gold?" "I think I've known all along that you didn't care for me," he replied. "At least not the way I care for you. But I kept kidding myself, in spite of appearances. And now I can't do that any longer, after you tell me that you still don't trust me even overnight. That you had to spy on me to make sure I hadn't broken my word!"

Tyra was on her feet, quivering with the tenseness of her necessity to straighten out the tangled tale, somehow, had developed between them.

"I know it looks that way, Sandy. But it isn't so. You've overlooked one thing."

"What?" he asked. "What have I overlooked?"

Tyra rushed on eagerly. "That when a girl loves a man she doesn't want him to unperish his life for anything! Sandy, who ever goes into the Chamber of the Serpent God again is almost sure to meet his death! Don't you see? Oh, can't you see? That's why I sided with Dad—that's why!"

The expression on his face stopped her. "If it were any girl but you, I might believe that story, Tyra. But you're not the kind to fear physical danger. I've seen you on the trail. I've seen you face things that most men would quit before. You're only stalling, Tyra. I don't know why. But it's plain that you are."

Tyra drew back, gasping a little. He did not know, apparently, what love could do to a woman—how it could enslave her, how it could make a coward of her, no matter if she had been brave. But how could she tell him? What words could she use to explain that universal weakness of a woman in love? For his mind was closed against her, now. All the avenues of approach were cut off.

She spoke slowly, sensing that her words were unconvincing to the man who stood before her. "I've bungled everything. I should have told you—back there, at the jungle camp—now things stood, then we could have gone on from there."

"Gone on yes, but to what? That's all over, Tyra. I've promised to save your gold for you. I'll do it, but I'm damned if I want to talk about it."

Tyra could have cried over that note of little-boy bravado in his voice. But she only stood watching him stride away toward camp.

Quietly, without attracting undue attention to herself, Tyra returned to camp. Sandy and Fleming were conferring about the enlargement of the premises. To appearances it might have been any friendly business discussion, except for the little scowl between Sandy's eyes.

The Yaguis had left some food on the coals of the fire, but Tyra found when she sat down that she wasn't hungry. She ate a wild orange, then went into her hut.

When she came out a short time later she wore her revolver belt which held, besides the pistol and cartridges, a hunting knife. In her hand she carried the camp axe and a flashlight.

She waited until Sandy and her father were concealed behind some shrubbery, then left the camp, making her way swiftly along the twilight forest aisles.

Only a short distance had been covered when she heard a sound in the brush. Recalling Hunsceel's statement about the white people being under constant surveillance, Tyra looked over her shoulder, apprehensively expecting to see some Masas. But when the bushes parted, it was one of the Yaguis, Manuel, who emerged. He carried a gun and a wild turkey dangled lifelessly from his hand.

Tyra recovered her pose and spoke to him in Spanish. "You've had a successful hunt, I see. Wild turkey will taste fine in the pot tonight."

"You are hunting, also, nana?" he asked. "I go for a little journey to dig yucca roots. Manuel Perhaps you had better return to camp. My father may want you."

She started on but she knew Manuel was watching her, and doubt puzzled by her attitude—when she had tried so hard to make casual—and her equipment which might or might not be that of a yucca digger. However, she did not look back and soon the brush made a screen between them.

The ancient mounds were before her now, dim and brooding in the half-light. She could not help but think how much they resembled sepulchres. With the agility of a monkey she scrambled up the uneven steps of the big pyramid, not halting until she reached the platform upon which the ruined temple stood. Even then she paused only long enough to take her breath before she began to climb the stairs of the temple.

Under The Slab
Level after level she descended into the bowels of the pyramid, sometimes turning a little on her side to be at one journey's end, sometimes stumbling upon the rolling steps. The beam of her torch played before her, showing the way for a few yards, and it seemed that as she passed the walls on either side, slanting their off forest from retreat.

She plunged down the last flight of steps and found herself, at last, peering into the limestone cavern where the twin serpents with their ruby eyes and realistically-green coils, towered their heads upon either side of the stone altar.

The light stopped her for an instant, then breathlessly, on tiptoe, she moved into the cavern. Part way across she halted, listening for a tiny sound she thought she heard, nearby. It was a faint swishing like the movement of tatters when one walked, or the wind high in the pines. Her light scanned around the cavern, falling upon the staircases and the sentinel-like statues, but she could see nothing to account for the whisper.

Reach the altar she knelt before it and for a moment in the torch beam, she might have been taken for a suppliant come to worship.

Columbus edged Kansas City, 4 to 3, in 12 innings last night to square the team's playoff standings in the American Association while Toledo downed Milwaukee, 8 to 5, in the inaugural of their series.

The Blues, who previously had beaten Columbus for a one-up lead in the best four-of-seven semi final playoffs, tied the count in the last half of the ninth when pinch-hitter Ken Sears clubbed a home run with a mate on base. Jimmy Gleeson doubled home the winning run in the 12th for the Red Birds. Toledo outlasted a four-run rally in the ninth to nip the Brewers. The same clubs oppose each other again tonight.

The Marion-Reserve Power Co.

From the first blueprint to the finished product, electric power speeds the production lines that are making America supreme in armament.

In every other war industry as well, Uncle Sam outproduces the Axis because he commands the greatest supply of electric power in the world.

That tremendous power advantage didn't just happen. Seven-eighths of it was built up by business management under public regulation—by men with a real incentive to work, create, succeed—and by the savings of millions of Americans invested in the electric industry.

As the industry grew under the American system of business management, it employed more and more people, and served more and more people—at lower and lower prices. Today, the average American home enjoys about twice as much electric service as it did 10 or 15 years ago—for the same amount of money.

The many other industries that make America great grow the same way—under proved and practical business management. That way of life is a part of what this country's fighting for—and a big reason why we'll win—because every one of our 133 million people has a personal stake in it!

SOLOMONS

than 150 planes in the battle of the Solomons since Aug. 7.

It was a field day for our pilots.

Pilots Are Inferior

The most encouraging feature of the battle was that Japanese pilots were definitely inferior to those in previous flights over the Pacific, and their planes continued to show "flying funeral pyre" traits, bursting into flames and crashing when hit by even a few bullets.

Watching from the ship's bridge I saw our fighter pilots shoot down 31 planes and anti-aircraft down 24 more in an action-packed 10 minutes as they broke up an 80-plane enemy formation attacking our ships. Fifty-five enemy planes plunged into the water trailing long plumes of smoke, or exploded or disintegrated in mid-air.

Setting the pace for our navy fighter pilots were Lieut. Donald E. Runyan, 29, of Crawfordville, Ind.; Lieut. H. M. Jensen, St. Paul, Minn.; and Lieut. (JG) Carlton Starks, Memphis, Tenn. Each brought his total number of plane victims to more than five, which constitutes an ace ranking.

Runyan was credited with four Japs today, bringing his total to eight, which was believed to have made him the navy's top ranking combat pilot. Starks and Jensen each shot six.

Runyan Tells Story

Runyan's story of his fight is typical of an ace's day's work. It follows:

"I led my division into the Jap dive-bombers ten miles from the ship. I saw at least 50 enemy planes in four groups escorted by 12 type OO (Double Zero) navy fighters.

"I went in after the tail man in the first group of Japs. He went down flaming. Then Zeros hopped down from above but I kept on after the dive-bombers. I figured I had to get them if possible before they reached the ship. The Zeros made several passes at me but I stuck on the dive-bombers and sent another down in flames.

"By this time the Japs were strung out into a line to dive. While I was shooting down the second dive-bomber, two Zeros got on me and we tumbled in a dog-fight. I lined up one and shot. He exploded in my gun sights.

"The other Zero's bullets were whizzing past me and I spun down to 8,000 feet. Dive-bombers were plunging past me and I got on one and dove with him. He fell off flaming.

"I got a shot at one more Zero before the fight ended, and he dove toward the water smoking. But he didn't crash and might have reached home.

"While I was attacking the bombers, others were hitting them, too, and they were falling off behind me one after another. Our squadron got a total of 27 enemy planes and we lost one pilot.

"Except for the other fellows in my division I'd have been in the drink many days ago. Our division got a total of nine planes today.

PRICE CURB PLAN PUSHED IN CONGRESS

Leaders Act for Prompt Consideration of Program.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—Administration leaders set the stage today for prompt congressional consideration of President Roosevelt's demand for legislation curbing rising wages, farm prices and profits.

Amendments to the existing price control act still were in the drafting stage but leaders expressed hope of meeting the Oct. 1 deadline—the date when the President said he would take the necessary action himself if Congress fails to do so.

Senator Brown (D-Mich.) already has set as his goal three days of hearings which would enable the senate banking committee to submit legislation for action late next week.

Brown piloted the original price control bill through the senate, and will sponsor the new amendments jointly with Chairman Wagner (D-N.Y.) of the full committee.

Republican clamor for quick adoption of the President's anti-inflation proposals continued in the house with some representatives opposing any hearings at all.

Before the senate recessed for the weekend, Brown obtained unanimous consent yesterday to introduce the bill in time to begin hearings Monday. Chairman Stagall (D-Ala.) of the house banking committee will offer the legislation in that branch.

No Jap Air Reports

There was no mention in reports from the front of Japanese aerial activity.

Australian troops in one sector where allied planes machine-gunned the Japanese from a low altitude later counted the bodies of more than 100 enemy soldiers scattered through the jungle.

Many green-clad Japanese snipers were said to have been shot out of trees by low-flying allied planes which literally chopped off the tree-tops with the murderous fire of their machine-guns and cannons.

In some places rows of trees were said to have been strafed so repeatedly by the allied planes that they looked more like tall hedges.

Wants Roosevelt Made Supreme Allied Leader

OTTAWA, Sept. 11.—(Canadian Press)—The United Nations can not win the war until the English-speaking people make under one leader and that leader should be President Roosevelt, Major William Dorman Jones, an American Canadian, said today.

Jones, a Canadian and a "Unionist," said that the British Empire, representing the British Empire, should be made the supreme leader of the world, and that the United Nations should be made the supreme leader of the world.

Madagascar Is Key To Allied Shipping Routes Eastward

By DEWITT MACKENZIE, Wide World War Analyst

The French island of Madagascar lies in such an out-of-the-way spot off the southeast coast of Africa that the gunfire from the big British attack there strikes faintly on the ears of the western world, but actually this operation for the purpose of gaining full control is a vital contribution to the meeting Hitler's drive against the Caucasus and Middle East.

Madagascar is the guardian of one of the world's greatest ocean highways—a broad highway which swings around the southern tip of Africa and not only feeds the strategic territory stretching from Egypt to India but connects with Russia's lifeline to the Persian Gulf. With the Mediterranean closed, convoys of troops and supplies from Britain and the United States depend largely on this long haul.

Danger To Shipping

Madagascar in the hands of the enemy might mean total severance of this route.

Because of the danger that Madagascar might fall into the hands of the Japanese, Britain last May occupied some strategic positions, but left most of the island in the hands of the French. This was an unsatisfactory situation, however, and one which the Japs have plotted constantly to circumvent.

For that reason it became necessary for the allies to assume full control of the island, and this accounts for the present British assault. As in the case of the expedition in May, Britain has proceeded with the full agreement and blessings of the United States government.

The Vichy government of course is protesting vigorously. However, there probably are few Frenchmen who don't understand the full significance of the allied move and heartily approve. America and Britain have made it clear that Madagascar is to be handed back to France after the war.

May Lose Importance

The time may come when this long route around the cape will cease to be essential, for we are in process of establishing an air route across Africa to the Middle East. One of the great pioneer feats of history is being carried out by American workers who are hewing airports out of the jungles through the heart of the dark continent.

Already air transport is operating over this new territory. One of these days great numbers of men and vast quantities of material will be moved by plane, but that's something of the future. Meantime the stern reality is that ocean transport is the backbone of allied operations. That's why we must control the seas.

It would have been an act of criminal folly to have disregarded Madagascar, in view of the present situation. India is in a state of rebellion, with the danger of Japanese invasion threatening. Hitler is throwing everything he has into his effort to break through into the Middle East and join forces with the Japs. Rome seeks an opportunity to strike again to conquer Egypt and deprive Britain of control of the whole eastern Mediterranean.

All these areas are being supplied in large part by ships which in a manner of speaking have to dip their consigns to Madagascar as they pass by.

COMMITTEE SPEEDS WORK ON TAX BILL

Limit of $25,000 on Income Not Included in Measure.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—Senate Finance committee men strive today to clean up odds and ends of the new tax bill and approve income surtax revisions which omitted specific mention of the $25,000 maximum income-affecting taxes recommended by President Roosevelt.

Chairman George held reporters, however.

"Take a look at those rates we voted today. You'll see a man can't keep much more than $25,000 unless he's a millionaire."

Treasury tables compiled to show the total impact of the new income tax rates and the 3 percent "victory" gross income levy showed that if a married man with two dependent children earned $30,000 a year, he would have to pay the government $23,336 in taxes. A man with a family of four would pay $29,029, and one who had an income of $50,000 could keep only $34,866.

The committee also voted a sharp jump in travel taxes, increasing the rates on train, bus and plane tickets to 15 per cent on ordinary accommodations and 20 per cent on reserved seats and sleepers. The present tax is 5 per cent on all categories. George, who said the purpose was to discourage civilian travel as well as to produce more revenue, estimated the increase would yield $34,800,000 a year.

The normal individual tax rate of 6 per cent, voted by the house, was approved, as were personal exemptions of $1,200 for married couples and $500 for single persons. However, the senate committee lowered the credit for dependents from $400 to $300.

PIQUA LIGHTS FAIL TO DIM IN ALARM

Surprise Test Catches Ohio City of 16,000 Flatfooted.

PIQUA, O., Sept. 11.—Ohio communities whose air raid defenses have not been perfected can take a tip from Piqua.

The army and state defense council sounded the state's first surprise air raid warning here Thursday night and this city of 16,000 inhabitants never did get completely blacked out.

In fact, it was caught so "flatfooted" that it could have been bombed severely in case of a real air raid," said Ralph Stone, executive director of the Ohio defense council.

"Surprise tests will be staged in other communities," he asserted, "and if Piqua is typical, other Ohio cities will have to be blacked out."

More civilian defense workers must be recruited, more tests should be staged and the public will have to be trained more thoroughly in what is expected of them in blackouts.

Throughout the 15-minute alarm here Thursday night lights blazed in many downtown stores and some residences.

Many shops closed and a freight train passed through the city in the midst of the test—its headlights glaring. Trains must be stopped during alarms, state officials said.

Automobile traffic halted and pedestrians got off downtown streets quickly after the warning. Stone said he was "very pleased at the manner of the raid warnings. Fire watchers and other civilian defense workers were alerted to call. Engines were dispatched to the fire stations."

Without warning, Piqua's army liaison officer, Capt. J. C. Miller, called the city's fire department to the scene.

Arnold, pointing out that he was a descendant of Confederate General Robert E. Lee, that members of his family had been serving in the armed forces for three generations and appealing for permission to serve.

Sheets contacted his two children, "School gave me a letter right to you," the army took a chance. His letter was referred to the War Relocation Authority. His wife said she would send work in a war plant to support her children.

Private Sheets was employed at Lorain yards of the American Ship Building Co. before induction.

Ohio Sports Chatter

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 11—Bits of this and that, picked up here and there:

Sid Gillman, former Ohio State griddle and now line coach at Miami University, almost fainted yesterday at practice.

As you know, one of the biggest worries of a grid coach each fall is to help his players with their financial problems, generally by getting jobs for them through which they earn their board and room.

Sid was approached yesterday by a freshman hunky who now looks as one of the varsity's best prospects.

"Can you help me out on a little financial matter?" the youngster asked.

Gillman, knowing Miami needed the boy to bolster the team, answered:

"Yeah, I'll try to find you a job somewhere. What can you do?"

But the boy answered:

"Oh, I don't want a job. I just wanted to know if you'd keep this $200 for me until I pay my fees when school opens!"

And Sid put in a hurry-up call for the smelling salts.

MAC PHAIL DOUBTS DODGERS CAN WIN

Meanwhile He Arranges To Enter Army Service.

By The Associated Press

BROOKLYN, Sept. 11—Larry MacPhail, the magnetic mastermind of the Brooklyn Dodgers, says he doubts his ball club can win the National League pennant so it may be just as well that he was in Washington today while the St. Louis Cardinals set siege to Ebbets Field.

TO ENTER GEORGETOWN

Sylvester (Stretch) Gooden, the six-foot seven-inch 185-pound giant who won AP All-American honors at Georgetown, is one of the hottest pitching prospects in the country. The long boy, who will be 18 on Sept. 30, will enter Georgetown university this fall, but he has offers from several big league scouts for substantial sums just to put him in the army.

FOR YOUR APPROVAL

The Fronton Tribune came up with the week's No. 1 headline. Over Sid Feder's arm quoting Billy Southworth of the Cardinals to the effect that "the Brooklyn Dodgers don't look any different to us than any other National League club," the Tribune offered: "Maybe Billy Southworth needs glasses!"

BLOOMFIELD WINS FROM ANGELO IN ROUGH MAT MATCH

Former New York Sailor Events
Score for Previous Defeat in Marion.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—Red Cochrane still is the welterweight champion of the world today, but there is no doubt that Frankie Bloomfield is the champion of Red Cochrane.

Cochrane, on leave for the navy to fight for the USO before being sent to the front, defeated Bloomfield in a rough mat match at the Armory arena, the ex-New York City man won two out of three falls over Angelo in a preliminary match.

While no definite word would be obtained last night from Bloomfield's manager, it was believed a return match between Angelo and Bloomfield is in the making for an early date.

Following last night's fight, Angelo presented a number of Philadelphia's citizens as referees because of Angelo's protest and to prove that he is the champion of the world.

Bloomfield captured the opening fall with a reverse punch and after breaking Angelo's own version of the crab.

Angelo set the pace in the second fall, but was repeatedly thwarted in his attempts to apply the devastating crab hold. It was while wrestling free of one of Angelo's fiercest headlocks that Bloomfield finally let himself wide open for the "kill" by falling to the mat.

During the third and decisive fall, Bloomfield rushed to the center of the ring at the start of the third fall, but was once again set back by Angelo's crab hold.

For a few rounds he did fairly well, but in the late stages his nose was coming out in a steady stream of blood.

There was a little rough stuff on both sides, but neither man complained, and neither did the 12,350 customers who chipped in to the gross take of $20,517.

Zivic obviously was in better condition for this fight than he was for his earlier meeting, although he had to scale better than 145 pounds so he could not make a title claim.

Soldier Thomas Wins
Soldier Thomas won a ten over ten and a bulldog headlock in scoring two consecutive falls over Flash Clifford in the one-hour semi-final match.

Wild Bill Zimovich, who claims he is the best developed man in this country, was disqualified for unnecessary roughness in his 30-minute preliminary bout with Axel Madsen, the Danish athletic star.

The president of the Brooklyn club went to the capital last night to complete arrangements for his entry into the army—probably with a commission in the field artillery in which he was a captain during the first World War.

But before he left he witnessed the 10-2 debacle which his Dodgers dropped to the Chicago Cubs and it apparently made him even happier that he was marching off to war as the Cards best the Giants 5-1 and cut the Brooklyn lead to two games.

Anyway he was laughing as he declared to newspapermen "I doubt if my club can win it" and recalled the warning he had given his players three weeks ago that they would have to hustle harder to stay on top.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 11—Larry MacPhail, the magnetic mastermind of the Brooklyn Dodgers, says he doubts his ball club can win the National League pennant so it may be just as well that he was in Washington today while the St. Louis Cardinals set siege to Ebbets Field.

The president of the Brooklyn club went to the capital last night to complete arrangements for his entry into the army—probably with a commission in the field artillery in which he was a captain during the first World War.

But before he left he witnessed the 10-2 debacle which his Dodgers dropped to the Chicago Cubs and it apparently made him even happier that he was marching off to war as the Cards best the Giants 5-1 and cut the Brooklyn lead to two games.

Anyway he was laughing as he declared to newspapermen "I doubt if my club can win it" and recalled the warning he had given his players three weeks ago that they would have to hustle harder to stay on top.
